800 Reported Dead in India Flooding

NEW DELIHI, Sept. 5 (AP) — Floods caused by the summer monsoons have killed more than 800 persons in seven northern states of India, and thousands are unaccounted for in West Bengal, near Calcutta, according to reports reaching here.

Government officials said that at least 20 persons drowned today when the monsoon-bloated Yamuna River swirled into the outlying streets of Old Delhi. The flood waters forced thousands of people to flee their homes and shacks.

Hundreds of thousands have been driven from flooded villages, and an estimated 10,000 homes have been destroyed since the annual rains began in June.

Many survivors in West Bengal were perched on housetops and in trees. The United News of India said that cholera patients in the Midnapore district west of Calcutta were being treated on the roof of the district hospital.

Newspapers said that the twin cities were facing the worst flood of the century. Officials said that 200,000 persons have been evacuated from low-lying areas of the national capital districts of Old and New Delhi, But flood forecasters said that the main government center in New Delhi was safe from flooding. The river has flooded dozens of villages in Haryana and Uttar Pradesh states to the north. Several thousand residents of a two-year-old housing project in Jhanjhurpur, about 13 miles north of New Delhi, fled from their homes yesterday, taking what they could in trucks and carts. The move is an annual event of the monsoon season since the project was built on lowlands along the Yamuna. Air force belicopters were dropping food to stranded villagers, including about 750 marooned communities in Orissa state, on the

Begin, Sadat Join Carter at Camp David

CAMP DAVID. Md., Sept. 5 (AP) — Egyptian President Anviar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin arrived here today for a Mideast summit meeting, and both indicated that the meeting here is the most crucial yet toward reaching peace between the two nations

Mr. Begin, upon his arrival at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, made clear that Israel does not expect an actual peace settlement to come out of the talks at the presidential retreat here, but is striving for progress toward a peace treaty in the luture.

The Israelis, he said, "will make all endeavors possible so that the Jer peace process can continue and ultimately be crowned with peace

Mr. Begin said nothing about Israel's bargaining position at the talks, which he called "the most intportant of all" the meetings he has held with Mr. Sadat.

Mr. Sadat, arriving earlier in the day, said that he came "at a crucial crossroads. The challenge is tre-mendous, but we have no choice but accept the challenge.

No one has the right to block the road to peace. This is not the time for maneuvers or outworn ideas. It is a time for magnanimity."

Mr. Sadat and Mr. Begin were welcomed by Vice President Mondale and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and then taken by helicopter in separate flights to Camp David, where President Carter was waiting to start the conference, JERUSALEM, Sept. 5 (NYT) — Two bombs exploded here today in what Israeli officials described as terrorist actions in opposition to the opening of the Middle East summit conference today at President Carter's retreat at Camp David, Md.

The explosions were the latest in a rash of blasts that have taken place regularly since it was announced last month that President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, Prime Min-ister Menachem Begin of Israel and President Carter would meet to try to revive the Middle East peace int-

The first explosion occurred on a road leading from Jerusalem to Bethlehem and seriously injured two men, a policeman who is an ex-pert at dismantling explosives and a workman who was directing hint toward the suspicious object.

Volatile Gas

The explosive was planted be-tween a truck and a wire fence that cordoned off a depot for storing highly volatile propane cooking gas. The blast blew the truck's tailgate high into the air but did not reach the halloon-shaped metal containers filled with gas. There were reports that both victims had their limbs blown off.

Police officials identified the se-riously wounded policeman only as Steve, A., decitor last name. He was described as an U.S. veteran of Vietnam who had emigrated to Israel in 1973 after working in the United States as a

54 Vietnamese Rescued After 3 Weeks Adrift

SINGAPORE, Sept. 5 (UPI) — A ship arrived today in Singapore carrying 54 survivors who said that 20 companions had died during their escape from Vietnam in an unseaworthy vessel that drifted for nearly three weeks.

The refugees said that the engine of their 30-foot boat failed after two days at sea and they ran out of food three days later. They buried their dead at sea, including a child born during the voyage.

A number of ships spotted them, the refugees said, but only two stopped. One dropped some supplies before sailing away without before a federal grand jury, the plot is even more bizarre.

It includes, so far, several whale-loving Vietnam veterans with their pockets full of $100. bills, a yellow submarine, a huge cache of powerful explosives, and some of the most sophisticated diving equipment available. Fed-eral officials say that the small group plotted to attack Soviet and Japanese whaleboats moored on the coast of Chile.

The investigators, and others with direct knowledge of the details, say that the money came from an international environmental organization involved in the bitter fight over commercial whaling, but these sources could not name the group. In July, acting on an FBI informant's tip, federal agents raided the home here of James Rose Jr., 31, a former Navy diver and demolinons expert. Mr. Rose led them to two stores of buried C-4 plastic explosive — enough, an agent said, to blow up a skyscraper. Mr. Rose was charged with interstate transportation of explosives without a license. His is the only arrest in the case so far. A federal grand jury here be-gan an investigation late last

In a briefcase in Mr. Rose's bouse on the outskirts of Miami. federal investigators also found 30 photographs of Soviet and Japanese whaleboats lying at anchor in the harbor at Talcahuano, Chile. In the garage, they found a two-man yellow

The explosives, the submarme, and the photos were not an unex-pected discovery, a federal law enforcement source said last week. In May, the FBI informant told authorities that he and Mr. Rose had purchased the C-4 explosive along with a quantity of blasting caps and 1,600 feet of detonator cord.

Mr. Caratelli told the FBI that, bond. He says that he does not know where the money came from, "There was a lot of publicity about my motive in this," he said. "I guess I have friends I don't even know about." The fact that Mr. Rose, who listed no personal assets on his bail application, could post a $50,000 bond and spend another $36,000 on elaborate diving equipment - some of it more sohisticated than anything owned by U.S. intelligence agencies — has not been lost on federal investigators here.

He already has turned down

secutors for clemency in return for information about his finan-cial backers. That is the information we'd very much like to know at this point," a federal investigator said. Mr. Rose also told the FBI informant that money for the project was coming from a secret hank account set up for him in the Bahamas, federal sources said. Federal investigators are checking into several hundred long distance telephone calls including a number to the Bahamas - which Rose made from his home bere in the several months before his arrest.

Still another aspect of the case that has proved puzzling is its apparent similarity to a novel pub-lished in 1976 called "Levisthan." The book is a fictional account about a scheme by a well-funded environmentalist group to blow up Soviet and Jap-anese whaling ships with the belp of a small submarine.

This is a very weird case," a federal investigator said. The discovery of the plot has disturbed environmental groups protesting commercial whaling. The Greenpeace Foundation, a West Coast group that has been the most active and vociferous in opposing Pacific whalers, last week denied involvement with Mr. Rose or the alleged plot to attack the whaling boats.

Federal sources said that investigators have not been able to link Mr. Rose with any known environmental group.

Although the official court records on the case are sketchy, an examination of the records and interviews with persons close to the investigation or directly in-volved in the alleged plot pro-duced this information about events leading to the arrest of

Explosives Are Purchased

In early March, according to records available in U.S. District Court in Miami, Mr. Rose contscted Mr. Caratelli, whom he met five years before at a diving school in Seattle. According to the FBI informant, Mr. Rose asked for help in buying explo-sives. Sources said that Mr. Caratelli arranged for the purchase and the two men traveled to Toledo, Ohio, on March 5. Mr. Rose paid $3,900 for the explosives, which sources said originally were purchased in Virginia.

An FBl affidavit states that Mr. Rose told Mr. Caratelli after the purchase that he planned to use the explosives "in an underwater demolition operation against whaling vessels in a foreign country. Mr. Rose allegedly brought the explosives back to Miami and on June 6, according to the affidavit. he and Mr. Caratelli went to Biomarine Industries in Malver, Pa_ where they purchased two sets of sophisticaled underwater breathing gear. The equipment, according to an official of the firm, allows a diver to remain underwater for up to 10 hours at a depth of 1.000 feet. The pair paid for the gear with $100 bills. They walked in with old clothes on and Mr. Rose pulled this roll of $100 bills out of his pants pocket and dropped it on the desk," said the Biomarine official. "Everything in the place stopped cold." The cost of the diving apparatus, he said, came to $36,440. Mr. Caratelli and Mr. Rose ROME. Sept. 5 (NYT) — Ten anachronistic pageantry and bom-days after the election of Pope John bast. Paul I, some characteristics of his pontificate have already emerged.

The Romans, scrutinizing their 263d hishop, were struck with the rest of the world oot so much by the program he announced only 15 bours after his election as by his distinctive style. "He has been Paul with the cardinals and John with the people," a prominent Jesuit, the Rev. Bartolomeo Sorge, said in a first appraisal.

"He is mindful of the universal dimensions of his mission like Montini, and a pastor like Roncalli."
Pope Paul VI, the former Giovanni Battista Montini, had indeed ruled the church with the typi-cal prudence of the Vatican official that he had been since his ordina-tion to the priesthood.

By the choice of his double name, unprecedented in church history, Pope John Paul has made it plain that he wanted to combine the policies and methods of his two immediate predecessors.

But it is fairly clear that he has brought something of his own to the office as well. He calls it humility — the Latin word for it, humili-tas, has been his official motto ever since Pope John consecrated him a hishop in 1958.

Critics of the future pope, then Albino Cardinal Luciani, patriarch of Venice, spoke of his 'pamperism," his cultivating an image of poverty ever since he scorned the insignia of his high ecclesiastical rank and directed his clergy to sell the gold ressures of their churches. the gold treasures of their churches to raise funds for the needy.

Body Found to Make Morphine-Like Chemical

Studies Offer Hope For Pain Control

By Harry Nelson

MONTREAL, Sept. 5 — Ongoing research into the ways the body handles pain offers hope for improved methods of controlling it. Within the last 10 years, and especially since 1975, an avalanche of animal and human studies has provided a better picture of the nerve pathways in the spinal cord and brain, which both conduct and block pain impulses, as well as a better understanding of the body's own chemical attackers of pain. The most recent of these reports were presented here last week at the Second World Congress on Pain attended by more than 1,000 researchers and clinicians.

It has been known for thousands of years that an individual's emotional state strongly influences his perception of pain.

For example, wounded soldiers are said to feel far less pain than equivalently injured civilians because for the soldier the wound means the war is over, whereas for the civilian there is no such com-

Chemical Dumps in U.S. Are a Cleanup Headache

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (WP)

— The first iokling that something had gone wrong in rural Hardeman County, Tenn., came last winter when local kitchen sinks started turning brown.

Then came reports from puzzled residents of the southwestern Tennessee farming region that their well water had developed a peculiar, insecticide-like odor. When a rash of unexplained cases of stomach cramps and dizzy spells hit the area, federal and state health iovestigators moved io.

They discovered about 350,000 leaky, 55-gallon drums of legally buried chemical waste on a oearhy ridgetop owned hy the Chicago-

Velsicol said that between 1965 and 1972 it dumped chemical waste at the site from its Memphis pesticide plant. But a company spokesman insists that there is no proof the 17 chemical cootaminants identified thus far in the local well water came from its dump. Moreover, Velsicol says its dumping was legal under state laws at the time. That leaves federal and state officials with no clear villain to blame and with the toxic chemcals, in-cluding some carcinogens, appar-ently still flowing into the local wa-

Other Cases

The Hardeman County problem is by no means unique. Throughout the United States, new stores of nearly forgotten, highly toxic chemical waste are being found. Federal officials estimate that there may be as many as 400 more suspicious hazardous waste sites in the country. And oo one seems to know who will pay to clean them up. Some recent examples:

· Authorities in Michigan, keeping tabs to toxic chemicals leaking from a company dump in Mootague into Lake Michigan, recently discovered that it could cost $10 million to elean up similar hazardous waste sites in the state "There's no way we're going to ask the taxpayers to ante up for that," said a state official.

 In Massachusetts, health officials got an emergency $1.3 millioo from the state legislature to remove 17,000 harrels of toxic chemicals leaking from an abandoned lot in Lowell into the Merrimac River, the water source for several communities. State officials are pledged to try to recover the cleanup mooey from financial backers of the bankrupt disposal firm and those who originally shipped the waste to the site. But a state official said, "We're oot holding our breath waiting to get paid."

• In the Love Canal situation in Niagara Falls, N.Y., officials have estimated that preliminary cleanup costs will run to $8 million. "And that," an Environmental Protection Agency official said, "is just to make the area liveable. We're not even talking about relocation costs."

Nearly 200 families may have to be permaneotly moved out of the area where thousands of drums of cancer-causiog ehemicals have leaked into hackyards and basements.

It is not evident who will pay. There's no provision for the federal government to come riding to the rescue," said Fred Lindsey, an EPA official in charge of the agency's other EPA official, "I guess the one who pays is whoever gets left hold-

According to EPA's senior hazardous waste official. Steffest Plehn, that could include any of an estimated 425,000 firms which generate toxic chemical waste, or the 25,000 firms that Iransport it, or the 25,000 firms that store, treat or dispose of it.

Beyond that, Mr. Plehn said, the focus of the hlame becomes less clear. "If a company is still legally tied to the stuff, then I guess it's theirs," he said. "If they've been able to unload it, then I guess the blame ages with it." hlame goes with it."

National Trust

Mr. Plehn said the answer may lie with efforts by the EPA to set up a oational trust to pay to clean hazardous waste sites. The trust would come from a per-too tax on waste as it is dumped and would be held for emergencies, such as the Love Canal disaster. The problem with such a solution, however, is that it will tax waste generators who may he complying with the law today for the environmental sins of others in the past. "It's oot fair, and more important it probably isn't legal," said a chemical industry official.

Thus far, only Michigan has sought to force chemical waste gen erators to pay for the cleanup of hazardous sites, although they may oot be directly involved in the problem.

Earlier this year, Michigan Attorney General Frank Kelly went to court to recoup $1 million that the state spent to clean out a site in Pontiac. The site was so dangerous officials said, that a spell of hot weather could have caused some of the chemicals to explode and send a toxic chemical cloud over the city's suburbe. city's suburbs.

Efforts Sidetracked

The state's efforts to force the issue were sidetracked, however when about 17 big waste genera-lors, including Ford and Dow-Corning, agreed to an out-of-court settlemeot.

Michigan is now closely water-ing another site owned by the Hooker Chemical and Plastics Corp. in Montague. There quant-ties of C-56 — a chemical building block for several pesticides — is leaking into White Lake, an arm of Lake Michigan. Hooker's disposal site, as well others in the state, may be legal, said Stewart Freeman, an assistant state attorney general. "But even assuming it is legal, we can still say." All right you cootain it, or you pay for it."

counterpart came for an equally friendly round of talks.

 Just last week, Prime Minister Morarji Desai and Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the head of Pakistan's military government, met in Nairobi, where both had gone to attend Jomo Kenyatta's funeral. An Indian government spokesman said that their 45-minute talk, the first meeting in years between the leaders of the two countries, had been held in "a warm and cordial atmosphere signifying the considerable improvement that has taken place in the climate of relations between the two countries, as well as their mutilateral continued betterment of their relations."

Unthinkable Before

Like the agreement to sell the wheat seed, such friendly talk would have been unthinkable just two years ago, when India and Pakistan were trading almost nothing except angry charges about Kashmir, the Himalayan territory that both of them claim. The advent of good feelings between India and Pakistan happens to coincide with several other improvements in dip-lomatic relations in this part of the world, and together they have reduced overall tensions and made war seem farther away from South Asia than it has seemed in years. India is getting along better not only with Pakistan, but also with China and Bangladesh; Bangladesh has resumed relations with Paki-stan, and even the reclusive Burmese recently sent a high-level team of officials to New Delhi to negotiate a new commerical and economic agreement.

In India and Pakistan, some people think that the improvement in relations is related to the removal from the scene of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who is now the leader of the opposition here, and former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who is in jail in Rawalpindi, pending his appeal of a murder conviction and death first moves toward the present rapprochement in 1976. But, at the same time, they were both tough and proud nationalists who used to enjoy baiting each other.

SEOUL, Sept. 5 (NYT) - The foreign ministers of Japan and South Korea ended two days of annual consultation here yesterday, apparently without resolving differences over relations with North Korea and trade imbalances.

At a news conference and in a joint communique issued at the end of the meeting. Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda sought to allay fears that Japan's signing of a treaty of peace and friendship with China might open the way for closer relations with North Korea. The new treaty with Peking, Mr. Sonoda said, will not affect Japan's stand on the Korean peninsula. Despite such assurances, however, he also told South Korean Foreign Minister Park Tong Jin that more and more people in Japan were be-ginning to feel that Japan's nonrecognition of North Korea was "unnatural."

In their review of the general situation in Asia, the South Korean delegates sought to get a stronger Japanese committment to a regional political alliance involving the United States, Japan and South Korea. In his official remarks, Mr. Park said that stronger solidarity among these nations was "essenuial" for maintenance of peace and security in the Pacific.

The planned withdrawal of 40,000 U.S. ground troops from South Korea and expanded Soviet naval strength in Asia were cited as factors requiring such a bond. The Japanese delegation delicately skipped that subject.

A 12-point communique made public here was full of generalities. indicating that the two countries had failed to agree on two issues that have caused emotional friction between Seoul and Tokyo.

One of most serious problems left unsolved was the widening trade imbalance, now close to $1.9 billion, favoring Tokyo. Seoul has continually pressed for early action to lower tariffs on Korea's agricultural products.

The communique promised positive efforts toward a more equitable trade balance but mentioned no concrete steps.

South Korean officials said that there was mounting public sentiment against Japan because of the deficits, which they said would in-crease to $3 billion by the end of the year. Japan has lately cut textile and footwear imports from Korea, Some officials here said privately

Terror — Plus

The tangle of Rhodesia has become more complicated with the grisly fall of a civilian plane and the apparent massacre of some of the survivors. Joshua Nkomo had caused a stir in that quarter of Africa by announcing that he had conferred secretly with the leader of the government of Rhodesia. Ian Smith. And it is Nkomo's branch of the Patriotic Front guerrillas that dominates the area where the plane crashed. Nkomo asserts that his gunners brought it down - but he denied responsibility for the shootings on the ground that gave a specially cruel twist to the Nkomo has been denounced by the "frontline" states - Rhodesia's black-ruled neighbors — who provide bases and diplomatic support for the Patriotic Front. They do not approve of any dealings with Ian Smith and are more or less committed to seeking black majority rule by means of a military victory, rather than by the transitional black-white regime that Smith has set up to prepare for free elections. And since this could mean continuing struggles among the various guerrilla groups, as well as with those black Rhodesians who do not want to be governed by Patriotic Front types, it would seem that the front-line states prefer the Angolan soluuon to that which worked in Kenya. And this is in spite of the fact that Angola is one of the front-line states, and presents ample evidence of the problems presented by purely forcible solutions.

Thus it may be that the airplane tragedy sprang from efforts to persuade the front-liners that Nkomo's followers are not selling out to Ian Smith. Since there was no evidence of such a sellout — indeed, the meeting seems to bave produced no constructive results — this would give an added bitterness to the deaths of nearly 50 men, women and children. But, of course, nearly all acts of ter-ror are intended to make debating points or psychological demonstrations.

The main point about this wastefully brutal bit of civil war is that it is of the kind that has characterized, and apparently will continue to mar, the movement of Rhodesia away from colonialism. The victims, wbether airline passengers, missionaries or black farmers, do not die because of their political or military significance, but because they are black or white, or associated with these colors and what they represent. And while the deaths may anger or frighten some and thus affect the course of events, the chief impact will be the wrath that will continue to drive blacks and whites apart. And that will be an evil heritage for the Zimbabwe that will emerge from Cecil Rhodes' old imperium.

That this divisiveness arises from the exploitation of blacks by whites is plain enough. But the fact that any state which is to find a practicable way of life in Africa (or anywhere else, for that matter) must utilize its resources, is equally obvious. And since Zimbabwe cannot return to the mix of grazing and small farming that its people knew in the days when the Bantu roamed at large, it must be able to use not only the machines that an alien civilization imported, but the skills that came with them. This is extremely difficult - racial, like tribal, differences are not abolished by a few kind words or by acts of parliament. But it is possible; it has been accomplished in some parts of Africa and the rest of the world, and there are the roots of such a solution even in Rhodesia, which has been one of the last communities to give formal recognition to the

So it is time for the Patriotic Front, for the front-line states, for Britain and the United States, which bave been active in seeking an answer for Zimbabwe's acute problem, to acknowledge that war and death, in the present circumstances, can do much to harm the future of this whole area of Africa. Ian Smith must be watched with legitimate suspicion; his mixed government has by no means established its workability, nor eliminated the fear that the ultimate solution, after elections, will be weighted on the side of the whites. But at least the agencies for co-operation between black and white do exist, and their possibilities for the development of all Zimbabwe seem more bopeful than the processs of mutual raids by guerrillas and Rhodesian troops, of shooting down planes and raiding farms and villages - of terror,

To look closely at the case of Francis Crawford, the American International Harvester man who went on trial in Moscow yesterday, is to be awed by the difficulty in getting the closed Soviet society and the open American society to run in phase.

In New Jersey last May the FBI arrested two Russian nondiplomats for spying. Ordinarily, they would have been quietly packed home — a corner-cutting procedure the United States has found useful over the years to facilitate its own spying and to keep espionage from unduly complicating the Soviel-American scene. The "Woodbridge two." however, were detained and set down for trial in anything but a discreet way. Did the season's Soviet-American sourness have a bit to do with it? More likely, a straight-arrow Justice Department was determined to enforce the law literally.

The KGB, however, was unimpressed, Ignoring considerations of diplomacy and trade, not to speak of justice, it crudely arrested Francis Crawford on a Moscow street, hoked up currency-violation charges and indicated that it would swap him for its operatives in New Jersey. As it had to, the United States rejected the deal: An innocent businessman could not be equated with two genuine espionage suspects. So the Russians are trying Mr. Crawford. And an American court will try the Russians, starting Sept. 12. If Moscow is of a mind to remove some of the "grit" that has clogged the diplomatic process in recent months, it will dispose of the Crawford case expeditiously and let the fellow go home. Any other outcome will suggest a truly disturbing degree of KGB control over Soviet policy. Even so, the damage is considerable.

As a result of the Crawford case, the KGB has shaken the American business community, one of the most detente-minded constituencies in the United States, and given a number of companies further reasons to consider closing their expensive, unproductive offices in Moscow. (We note with dismay, by the way, reports that, while many Moscowbased U.S. firms finally expressed solidarity with Mr. Crawford, some took advantage of International Harvester's misfortune.) In the coincidental (and unfinished) American debate over trading with Moscow, the Crawford case has strengthened the hand of those who believe that trade is risky, that trade should be used for political retaliation. and that in certain high-technology areas like oil drilling, the United States should sell the service but not the technology itself. For all that, the lagging Soviet economy can thank

Further, to an American public already troubled by Soviet policy on human rights. Africa and arms-building, the case bas conveyed that a broad-scale Soviet campaign against detente is on.

We would not contend that the United States has made no contribution of its own to the accumulation of "grit" since last spring, Nor would we deny that the Soviet government has sought recently to remove some of it - for instance, by finally backing off from a full assault on the American correspondents accused of slander. Moscow would do well to back off on Francis Crawford as well. At this point the two countries should not be manufacturing obstacles to their quest for a fair agreement on limiting strategic arms.

The Struggle for Alaska

By John B. Oakes

NEW YORK — Though few Americans outside Alaska seem to be aware of it, a classic struggle to prevent one of the great environmental ripoffs of the 20th century has been taking place this summer in an obscure committee room of the U.S. Senate — and at this point it looks as though the American people may well turn out to be the losers once again.

The basic issue is whether the last major areas of ecological signif-icance in the Uoited States, whose ulumare disposition is still in the hands of Congress, will be opened to the usual coterie of developers. prospectors, oilmen, loggers and lobbyists - or whelber the unique wildlife, water, forest, wilderness and scenic resources of these fragile Alaskan lands will be protected for the permanent enjoyment and benefit of all the American people who own them. Because of a lack of leadership in the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. the prognosis at this stage of the game is oot good.

Generous Endowment

It is not as though Alaska - by far the largest state (more than twice the size of Texas) and with by far the smallest population (about that of Buffalo) — were being deprived of what rightfully beloged to it, as many of Alaska's hungry politicians, led by its two senators. Stevens and Gravel. would have the American people believe. Congress has already given Alaska and its half-million inhabitants - in the most generous endowment ever bestowed on a new state — the right to select more than 100 million of its total 375 million acres (including Prudhoe Bay and most of the other potential oil lands) as a kind of dowry for economic development. In addition, 45 million acres (and nearly a billion dollars) have been assigned to the 65,000 Aleuts and Eskimos in settlement of native claims.

What more then, can Alaska's people and politicians want? "They want it all, and they want it now," says Chairman Morris K. Udall of the House Interior Committee, who shepherded his Alaska "national interest" land-use bill (H.R. 39) through the House of Representatives in May. This bill, a compromise proposal that badly needs strengthening in the Senate, would at least reserve, under varying degrees of federal protection for conservation purposes, about 100 mil-lion acres of Alaska's irreplaceable natural resources, mainly in the sources of southeast Alaska, de-form of national parks, wildlife stroying scenic, watersbed and refuges, scenie rivers and wilderoess. Left open, for all the development Alaska's get-rich-quick ex-ploiters are capable of, would be at least 90 percent of the state's high-potential oil and gas lands, and 60 to 70 percept of its potential hard-rock mineral producing areas.

Destructive

Yet many of Alaska's development-oriented politicians, including former Gov. Walter E. Hickel, running again for governor, and Sen.
Ted Sievens, running for re-election — with the enthusiastic support of all the potential plunderers on hand — want oot merely to cut down the already cutrailed and barely adequate areas earmarked for special federal protection under the House bill. Even more important to them and more devastating to the eovironment, they want to eviscerate the kinds of protection provided, opening particularly frag-ile areas to miners, oil prospectors and loggers when so much unexplored, less sensitive land is already available to them.

For example, they would under-mine the enure system of federal protection in the very areas most in need of it, through high-sounding but totally destructive proposals for "cooperative management" of state and federal lands. They want the state to be able to select some 10 million acres (of the 100 million allotted to it) that are included in proposed national parks and refuges of vital ecologi-cal significance, thus creating in-holdings and reducing boundaries to the extreme detriment of some of the very areas most in need of protection. They would open up par-ticularly vulnerable parts of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas exploration that would be sure to result in the decimation one of the greatest remaining caribou herds on earth, on which many Eskimos rely for their liveli-

Threat of Filibuster

They would shrivel the stupen-dous Gates of the Arctic National Park to promote mining and other forms of exploitation. They would cut into the Yukon Flats for alleged agricultural and probable secondbome development, thus further reducing what is still one of the major sources of water fowl for the entire continent. They would encourage commercial loggers to continue to hack away - largely for export to Japan — the speciacular timber re-sources of southeast Alaska, de-

ONDON - It is one of the bazards of a traveling Englishman, particularly in America, that he is likely to find himself held personally responsible for allowing Britain to be undermined by militaant labor unions.

It is not a charge that is easy to refute convincingly, at a time when a tiny minority of car workers are threatening once more to close down their industry; and it suits many people to blame the industri-al troubles of the country on the al troubles of the country on the unions. This week, when the trades unioos (as we call the labor unions) are bolding their annual congress, many workers' leaders seem once again delighted to play the role of hogeymen, delivering inarticulate urades about the glories of nationalization and the villany of bosses. But the congress provides a good opportunity to assess to what extent the unions are really running

The historical facts have always encouraged the view that the Labor Party is the creature of the unions, who invented it as their parliamen-tary wing and who have financed it ever since with political levies. And the more left-wing leaders, vocally demanding more nationalization. import controls or wealth taxes, leave no doubt as to where they would like the Labor Party to go.

But the Labor Party has not re-

It is in their negative industrial overmanning, to produce the dead. locks with management and with each other that have so effectively crippled Leyland, for example. But how far is it the leaders of the mass unions, who are the chief bogers, who are to blame? Overman and restrictive practices are not confined to the highly unionized workers; the proliferation of unneressary jobs is as visible in the mid-die-class professions as it is among the proletariat.

Contint

Few unions have been such successful closed shops as the Law Society, which safeguards the mo-nopoly of British lawyers over the most routine practices, like house buying. Few workers are so ruthless in defending their jobs as are redundant diplomats or corporate executives. The causes of overnan-ning go much deeper than union leadership; anyone who sees him-self in danger of losing his job, whether unionized or not, will take steps to safeguard his employment.

And there remains a serious de-bate as to whether the unions are primarily to blame for the sad per-formance of British industry. Last weekend the Conservative spokes-man for employment, Jim Prior, a plain-speaking farmer with refreshing candor, said in an interview that "if you look back over the last 50 years, bad management is more responsible for the problems of British industry than bad unions." The London Times protested against Prior in an editorial, but many industrialists would privately agree with him, and in the case of Leyland — a caricature of both sides — the appalling failures of management have certainly equaled the obstructions of the unions.

The exasperating restrictions caused by British unions are all too visible to any visitor, but it is too easy to blame them on such a crude bogey as left-wing labor unions. They are part of a much more widespread defensiveness, made more determined by the rising unemploy-ment, which takes its highest toll among the school-leavers.

among the school-leavers.

In the coming election the debate about jobs will be a fierce one; it has already begun with a Tory poster showing a dole queue with the slogan "Labor Isn't Working" It will be tempting, and probably irresistible, for the Tories (in spite of prior's condot) to present unexpending the prior's condot to present unexpending the prior to the present unexpending the prior to the prior to the prior to the present unexpending the prior to the prio of Prior's candor) to present unem-ployment as the fault of low pro-ductivity caused by union stab-bornness. But the problem is much more difficult and challenging. It is how to create the almosphere of security and collaboration, in a country with a long history of industrial pessimism, in which both workers and management can dare to look forward to innovation and reforms countries about eventual Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Descri and Gaza Strip. The talks came undone when Mr. Begin refused to consider, even in principle, eventu-al negotiations for the return of the territory west of the Jordan River

Begin subsequently came under terrible internal and external pres-sure because of his intransigent stand. At a meeting of Israeli and

Egyptian foreign ministers with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance in Britain in mid-July, the Israelis fi-oally accepted the principle of oegotiating on sovereignty over the West Bank. At that point Sadat changed his mind and broke off the talks once again. to these circumstances it makes no sense to try to solve the whole problem at Camp David. Talk of stationing American troops on the West Bank or the Gaza Strip, if not to Arab sovereignty.

By Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — President Carter doesn't have to — and shouldn't try to — hit a home run at the Mideast summit talks nt
Camp David this week. All he needs to do is advance the runners which is to say, provide a frame-work for resumption of the Egyp-tian-Israeli talks.

For despite all the scare talk, there is no great danger, even if the conference collapses, of a new war or a rapprochemeot between Egypt and Russia. The only serious peril, the danger which has to be avoided, is that President Sadat will retreat from his forward position on peace to a pan-Arab from against Israel. Superficially, to be sure, the dan-ger of another war looms large.

Lebanon is a firecracker, and oobody can be certain where the sparks will fly. Palestinian gunsingers are on the loose, trying to spoil Camp David by setting the . Near East ablaze.

Superiority

But the controlling fact is Israel's overwhelming military superiority. The Israelis now have enough stores and weaponry to fight a three-front war for the oext 90 days. They could easily take Cairo and Damascus. The leaders of Egypt. Syria and Jordan know all that, and they are at pains to avoid that, and they are at pains to avoid a conflagration.

As to an Egyptian rapprochement with Russia, it is highly doubtful that Moscow, having been once double-crossed by Mr. Sadat, would take him back. The Russians have forged bonds with Sadat's main enemies in Libya, Iraq, South Yemen and other radical states. Moscow bas been entertaining Syria's foreign mioister. Abdel Halim Khaddam, as a kind of warning to Sadat not to take another shot at the Soviet Union.

Nor is there any reason to think Sadat would turn back to the Russians. He has crushed the pro-Soviel faction in Egypt, and used hostility to Russia to cement his base with the Egyptian military. Most important of all, he depends for subsidies on Saudi Arabia

The Saudis, in the fullness of their and-communism, would never countenance a revival of Egypt's connection with Russia. On the contrary. Prince Fahd, the Saudi ruler, has been pushing Egypt to look south, not north, and to the right, not the left. Fahd has been. for the last six months, working for an Arab summit meeting. At such a session Sadat would finally drop score a big gain at Camp David is the initiative he made in Jerusalem, at least premature. For the negotiaand join with other Arab leaders in tions between Israel and Egypt working to build up enough strength to force Israel to make a have simply not gotten that far.

The trick at Camp David is to get the Egyptian-Israeli talks going once again. To that end, Begin ought to be pressed to say out loud and unantibiguously that Israel Indeed, the journey to Camp David was made precisely because President Sadat, under Saudi pressure, began to harden his position just as Israel's Prime Minister Menahem Begin began to soften his. Bilateral negotiations between Israel and Egypt had been opened just after Sadat's historic visit to accepts, in keeping with United Nations Resolution 242, the principle of withdrawal from all occupied territories, including the West Bank Jerusalem last fall. There was al-most no problem between the two of the Jordan.

Sadat ought to be pressed to accept that as his contribution to general settlement of the overal Arab conflict with Israel. Israel and Egypt should then go forward with the negotiation for a bilateral deal that would, by itself, reduce to almost zero any chances of the New East boiling into a new war.

Nikita Mikhalkov Discusses Career

Soviet Director Has a Hit in New York

By Barbara Crossette

TEW YORK, Sept. 5 (NYT) — The release of a Soviet film in the United States is a rare enough event. But the appearance of "A Slave of Love," by the young director Nikita Mikhalkov, has turned out to be more than a curiosity: It was one of the summer's happiest critical surprises and no one could have been more delighted than the director

"I am very surprised to bear of people lining up in the streets of New York to see my picture." Mikhalkov said through an interpreter. The director was perched on a chair in his suite in New York City's Algonquin Hotel, full of energy despite a flight from Moscow and ready to spring from his corner at any moment to dramatize a

What he was — and is — doing is to make films of great visual beauty that become canvases against which he develops his characters and explores their relationships. He returns to the word "character" fre-quently in describing his own work and the work of those who have influenced him. Though he says that there are no special features he would choose to single out as his cinematic "signature," he does believe that the interaction of people, often within a historical setting, is what his work is all about.

BONN, Sept. 5 (AP-DJ) — The West German manufacturing industry, despite predicting ruin from the rise of the Deutsche-mark, has tenaciously held onto its export markets even if it has meant sacri-

Exports in the first seven months of 1978 climbed 5.6 percent from a year earlier, to 21.247 hillion DM. According to the Bundesbank, exports in real terms gained 5 percent in the first half.

The climb is more impressive when compared with the mark's 5.4 percent rise at the end of July against the currencies of West Germany's most important trading partners, compared with the the vear-ago period.

Many industries have pointed to agging foreign orders, and probable losses as a result, as evidence of the drag that the upvaluation has had on them. But this may be changing.

The Economics Ministry said today that new foreign orders in-creased 1.9 percent in June from May after rising I percent in May from April. Preliminary figures released today indicate that foreign orders fell 24 percent in July from June, with overall orders off 0.6 percent. However, analysts say this

Economic Forecasting reported an upturn in West German manufacturers' business expectations. The gain, it said, was due to a sharp improvement in their outlook for export orders.

Recent corporate reports and preliminary economic indicators back up the survey's findings. Evidently, while lamenting the com-petitive loss they were suffering West German businesses adapted strategies, learned through experi-ence, to cushion the blow of an appreciating currency.

The strategies embody the mar-keting law that it is easier to take a loss in keep an export market than to try and regain a lost market. Thus, the competitive reaction takes place on the most elemental evel — prices.

High fixed-capital costs and the metamorphosis of labor into a near-fixed cost provide an addi-tional incentive for the move to price competition. As cutting capacity becomes as expensive as cut-ting prices, the short-term aim is to drop prices and let profits suffer. The long-term aim is to hope for the best through a resurgence of

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Dow Chemical Sees Higher Payout

After two years of earnings declines, Dow Chemical expects a "moderate" earnings growth in 1978 of about 2 percent to 3 percent, president Paul Oreffice says. He also predicts another modest earnings increase next year and says the company might soon raise its dividend, currently at 30 cents per quarter. In the current quarter ending Sept. 30, Mr. Oreffice expects Dow's net income in rise 5 percent to 7 percent with sales increasing by a slightly larger per-centage. Dow earned $144.9 million, or 78 cents a share, on sales of $1.59 billion a year earlier. He also share, on sales of $1.39 billion a year earlier. He also predicts fourth quarter earnings "will be up by a greater percentage than the third quarter — perhaps as mueb as 20 percent — over the year-earlier $103.7 million, or 57 cents a share, with sales up 10 percent to 12 percent from last year's $1.55 billion. The improved second half results should overcome the earnings decline in the first six months, giving a 1978 net of between $3.05 a share and $3.10 compared with $3 a chare last year. pared with $3 a share last year.

Japan Concerns Eliminate Payout

Kawasaki Heavy Industries, citing heavy exchange losses and a slump in its shipbuilding business, says that it will not pay an interim divided for the Sept. 30 half. Separately. Hitachi Shipbuilding and Engineering and Sumitomo Heavy Industries say they, too, will farego interim dividend payments far the half. Last week, two other major Japanese companies, Mitsubishi Heavy Industries and Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries, announced similar payout cuts. Kawasaki said exchange losses, so far totaling 6 cuts. Kawasaki said exchange losses, so far totaling 6

High-Flying Shares Seen Retreating

Caution Urged on U.S. Gambling Issues

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP-DI) — With most of the big brokerage houses advising elients either to sell most of their holdings of the high-flying gambling stocks, or to be very wary about chasing them, some analysts believe the issues could be headed for a fall.

And both major U.S. stock exchanges, reacting to mounting concern over the wild speculation gambling-related stocks, imposed sharply stiffer margin re-quirements late Friday covering transactions in a total of 13 of these stocks and live related debenture issues. Buyers of the securities now must put up at least 75 percent cash rather than the 50 percent required formerly.

Steps toward restraining margin buying of gamhling stocks were initiated by A.G. Becker Inc. last Thursday, when it raised to 100 percent the cash required on transactions involving shares of Bally Manufacturing, Caesars World, Playboy, Ramada Inns and Resorts International (American). The move triggered enormous selling in gambling stocks near the close on Thursday, generating steep price declines that continued through Friday's trading.

Echoing a growing conso among Wall Street's biggest bro-kers, E.F. Hutton & Co. Vice President Anthony Correra said that the gamhling stocks "are overbought, they have run up too far, too fast. and we think traders should take profits and sell the stocks."

Herzfeld & Stern, an old-line Wall Street broker, followed Becker's move Friday in raising the gambling-stock margin to 100 percent. "The activity in the group is sheer speculation, and we don't want any part of it," says Alan Brenits, director of research at Herzfeld & Stern.

Savings Certificates Hurt U.S. Thrift Firms' Profits

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP-DJ) — U.S. thrift institutions, faced with escalating interest costs, are becoming increasingly disenchanted with the special six-month certificates authorized earlier this year. The certificates, whose interest rates are pegged in movements in the rate on six-month U.S. Treasury bills, were designed to attract deposits to the thrift industry, which provides the bulk of U.S. mortgage financing. While the in-atrument has been fairly successful in averting heavy deposit outflows, it has put a squeeze on profits.

Many say that the profit picture

could worsen, reflecting the recent sharp rise in treasury bill rates. Thrift institutions are allowed to pay ¼ percentage point above the bill rate on the special certificates. Compounding of interest on the certificates raises the cost even higher for the issuers. As a result, many institutions inreviewed say they might bave to review their policies on the carifi-cates. Robert Rivel, president of Union Dime Savings Bank, New York, holds that the certificates are "already too expensive." The executive adds, "if we were left to our own," the bank likely would take some measure to slow the inflow of phone calls are from money bro-kers, who generally want to bring together two banks, which in turn the high-cost deposits.

He says he would like to see an increase in the minimum deposits in such certificates to $25,000 from $10,000. or a reduction in the rate spread over the Treasury bills.

Other institutions, mainly on the East Coast, say they want to stop offering the certificates altogheter but fear losing customers to com-petitors if they did.

One key problem has been that most funds going into the special certificates have simply been transfers from accounts bearing lower interest rates, such as regular savings accounts where the rate is only 514 percent. According to specialists, in some areas of the country up to 80 percent of the money going into the special certificates was transferred out of existing

231 SOUTH LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60693

Second quarter 1978 was another record earnings period for Continental

Income before security transactions was $40,101,000, a 14.2% increase over second quarter 1977. Income before security transactions for the first half of this year totaled $80,297,000, a 14.6% gain over the first half of 1977. This represents an annualized rate of return on average stockholders' equity of 15.4% in the first half of the year, compared with 15% in the similar 1977

Since 1962, when we opened our first European office, we have increased our assets almost sevenfold from $4 billion to more than $26 billion. Today we are the seventh largest bank in the United States with 126 offices in 39 countries. In Europe alone we have 20 locations with specialists who are committed to serving the financial needs of the business community.

THE WORLD YOU LIVE.

From Cairo to Quito. people are asking for quality health care.

To answer this need, AMI provides health care systems and services on a worldwide basis, and we've barely scratched the surface of this vast. new market.

We're working with com-munity leaders in the U.K., Europe, the Middle East, Africa, the U.S., and Latin America to answer the health care needs of different environments.

Our programs combine quality health care with costeffectiveness, not only in the hospitals we own and manage here and abroad, but also in the outpatient programs, shared medical services, and hospital planning and management systems we deliver worldwide.

We're providing open heart surgery facilities at our hospi-tals in London for patients airlifted from the Netherlands and Norway: training health care technologists in Venezuela; managing the first major private hospital project in Egypt in 25 years; and operating the first mobile CAT scanner service in the U.S.

European Head Office, American Medical (Europe) Ltd., 46 Wimpole Street, London, England W1N7DG

We're performing feasibility studies for a pediatric care center in Argentina; providing hos-pital financial control and information systems in Quito, Ecuador; and commissioning government hospitals in Kuwait.

Additionally, AMI is developing modern health care centers for America's medically underserved areas. Our pre-engineered hospital designs significantly reduce construction time and cost for communities in need of better health care now.

AMI's 13,000 health care professionals are helping more than 400 communities on five continents to plan, design, organize and operate cost-effective health care services of every kind. That's AMI's response to the worldwide need for health care.

AFTERNOON MEN

By Anthony Powell. Popular Library. Paperback. 252 pp. $1.95 Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

CAN think of quite a few novell ists who have acquired a respectable reputation by publishing several unsuccessful books. The public seems sympathetically inclided toward a man who keeps trying against the odds. They see him as game, a good sport.
Years ago, Al Capp did a cartoon strip about a mad scientist who demonstrated, among other things, that if you lock any two people of opposite sexes in a room for two weeks, they will inevitably fall in love. Perhaps readers of nov-els are rather like that: some of them will get to like any oovelist with whom they are continually thrown together by circumstance. Anthony Powell is an ironic instance of this syndrome, for he writes good unsuccessful covels. When Little Brown bravely brought out several of his books in the early 1960's, they did not find many readers. It was assumed that, like Henry Green and Ford Madox Ford, Powell was simply too Brit-

Then he embarked on "The Music of Time," a twelve-covel saga, and the American public took him to their bosom because they cannot resist sagas. They began to admire the old boy for so improbably hanging in there. They shook their heads incredulously and said, "You just can't discourage that guy."
Part of the irony of Powell's case

lies in the fact that his earlier single-volume novels are even better reading, in my opinion at least, than "The Music of Time," and hardly anyone knows of their existence. "Afternoon Men," From a View to a Death," Agents and Paoeots, ""Venusberg" — I omit "What's Become of Waring?" are all fine.

Not that "The Music of Time" isn't good too, but there are disadvantages in its structure. Because each volume of the twelve was written, published and advertised as standing independently of the others, there is quite a bit of overlap-ping, of backing and filling, io them. The same characters are pursued through the whole series and Powell has to keep reintroducing them and filling in their pasts for readers who began in the middle. It would be a better work if it were rewritten as a single long movel with these backward lessons edited

This slowing up, or dragging down, of "The Music of Time" is especially noticeable when you read the earlier oovels, which are all brilliantly lean examples of English understatement. Nobody, oot even Evelyn Wangh, has done the British "lost generation" better than Anthony Powell. While his wit is more dry and not quite so byper-bolical as Waugh's, it may also be a bit closer to the bone. For some mysterious reason, there are no dates at all oo the co-pyright page of this paperback edi-tion of "Afternooo Men," but if I remember correctly, the novel was originally published in 1932 and is Powell's first - which makes it all the more remarkable. We forget

BRIDGE.

By Alan Truscott

Two-card endings do oot usually present any problems, but the following positioo supports the thesis that you should show that you treat your partner's problems as your own and actively help him solve

In no-trump East has to lead. He knows that his partner has the spade queen, but does oot know where the heart jack is. If he leads his winning diamond, he gives his partner a chance to make an error; so he must lead the heart and the defense will get all they are entitled to, in this case two tricks.

The other example diagrammed is subtle. If West is a bad player. the defense has no trouble; but if he is a good player, his partner will need to be an outstanding defender to prevent disaster.

Three oo-trump is reached after a oormal auction and West leads. the heart seven. East wins with the ace and routinely returns the six. When West is a bad player he wins and it is all over. Sooner or later East will score two spade tricks and one diamood trick for down one.

of American novelists have given rise to the impression that modern fiction was born with Hemingway and Fitzgerald. nd Fitzgerald.
Since it is impossible to describe a decent plot. I will simply quote a few sentences from "Afternoon

Men" to give you some idea of the wry bouquet. Here is a fashionable young woman entering a room: "She was not tall and she had big eves that made her seem as if she were all at once amused and surprised and at the same time disappointed. It was as if it had been ust what she had expected and yet it had come as a shock to her when she saw what human beings were really like." When one character takes up with a girl who strives, in her dress, for an early Augustus John effect, a friend says: You'll oever get rid of her. You never get rid of girls dressed like that." Asked what her father does, a young woman says "He's a failure." Asked "Where does he fail?" she says, "He's a re-tired failure. You must meet him." When the young man pursues the Augustus John girl, Powell describes it this way: "Slowly, but very deliberately, the brooding edifice of seduction, creaking and incongruous, came into being

Here is a fashionable hangout. "It was almost dark in the restaurant, with a suggestion of tropics before a typhoon." In the country, "The air was fresh, rather metallic and Scandinavian." One of my favorite scenes is a discussion, among a group of his friends, of how much a would-be suicide who had second thoughts should give as a reward to the fishermen who pulled him out of the sea. In a burst of drunken rhetoric, one of the characters describes himself and his circle of acquaiotances as "exiled forever from the pleasant pastures of debonaire insouciance." There is a wonderful combination of wistfulness and irooy in that line, just as there is allthrough "Afternoon Men."

But unfortunately for East his partner is a good player and ducks the return. From his angle it is quite likely that East began with ace-six-four of hearts. In that case the duck assures the defense four heart tricks, and the defeat of the contract if East wins one trick in the other suits. But as it happens the duck is a disaster. East will score three tricks but West's heart king becomes useless and South rolls in nine tricks.

So it is necessary for East to fore-see the problem. If his partner has the heart king, he can see the de-fense is due to take five tricks, so at the second trick be should lead a club, a neutral play. When he leads his heart later, West will have no temptation to duck, and nothing has been lost in the unlikely event that West has king and jack or hearts.

West led the heart seven.

The Soccer Scene

Liverpool's 'Simple' Lesson

LONDON, Sept. 5 (IHT) - The season of regret may already be

Yes, already. Europe's major four days, soccer leagues are scarcely into There their first full month, yet rumblings of discontent are rife. From Hamburg, we learn that Kevin Keegan, perhaps the continent's highest-paid star now that Johan Cruyff - temporarily at least retired, is desperate to leave West Keegan's problem is one that he has tried to deny for over a year; his star status, while popular with the crowds and the club, does nothing for his friendships among his teammates, who persist in not passing him the ball. Even to an eager pimpernel such as Keegan this can prove exasperating particularly now that there seems a real hope of his realizing many a soccer player's dream, in transfer to the Real Madrid club of Spain.

We shall wait and see. Meanwhile, Keegan's old club, Liverpool, is very much the source of pain and humiliation as far as those expensive Argentine World Cup imports, Osvaldo Ardiles and Ricardo Villa, are concerned. Tnttenham Hntspurs' two senors are recu-

The Pace Itself What is worrying about the tack-le from Smith — which came in the very first minute and caused a blood clut in Ardiles's thigh — are the implications beyond the Argen-tine's personal pain. I recall Johan Cruyff, four years ago, telling me that he shared the ambition of players around the world in compete in English soccer, but that be doubted if he had been an Englishman be could have developed the skills be has. He referred ant only to the crunching fouls of Messrs. Smith and company, but also the relentless, smothering pace of the

The true ballplayers of England's recent past — Rodney Marsh, George Best and, perhaps to a lesser degree, Duncan McKenzie have always bemoaned the empha-sis on blatant physical play, which neezes the creativity from them, flattens their touch. Liverpool was once the team that epitomized aggressive teamwork, not, begging Smith's pardon, a dirty team, but nne that nevertheless set out to stifle the opposition.

It is a style, a steamrollering con-sistency, that has elevated Liver-pool, holders of the European Cup, among the world's best teams. Best? Well, most-competitive at any rate. However, since Bob Paisley took over three seasons ago, new players have gradually been added to the team, players of the touch and vision of Graeme Souness and Kenny Dalglish (both Scots) who give vision and flourish alongside all the sweat.

Attack is Uppermost

Significantly, while maintaining the amazing powers of regeneration that have kept Liverpool at the top and one one a 3 3 for a decade and a half, Paisley has bought players who want to attack. Last month, for example, he purenguer, Bernard (3), Corneto (5), Kobel (8)

A Poor Winner

That clicke of British coaching was reiterated by Rnn Saunders, Aston Villa's manager who scolled: 'Didn't do much the Argentines, did they? Other English players have created bigger problems for us than those twn."
Wouldn't it be too easy to dismiss, right now, Tottenham's brave experiment in importing overseas talent? And easy, also, for Arsenal, on the verge of signing the Dutch World Cup captain, Rudi Krol, to withdraw behind the British is Best slogan? Easy, but deceitful. Liverpool is best, not British; bow far did England score in the last twn World Cups?

No. Liverpool is a phenomenon within a sterile league. Where until now its own means to specess was in be better disciplined than the rest in the nld, forcing physical approach, it now blossoms with new dimensions. It is, in its way, gambling as much as Spurs that its new emphasis oo geting plavers forward will surprise as well as outscore opponents. "We've got to keep nur beads," says Paisley. "But nur play last Saturday was frighten-ing. Just imagine what we'd be like if we were coached!"

Not So 'Simple'

The last was a jibe against the stereotype coaches of England whn occasionally point to Liverpool's "simple" play. Keith Burkinshaw of Tnttenham, Tnny Book of Man-chester City and Bobby Robson of Ipswich have all suffered defeats ennigh this season to know that Liverpool is indeed simple. "It's fit, adaptable, skillful, disciplined and earthy," says Robson, "so simple it's the perfect side." It is also something of a salutary lesson for our new Argentine friends. Ardiles's most superlative moment in the World Cup came when he astonished Poland by runniog 40 meters at it with the ball to create the second goal. On Saturday, from the best in Europe, he saw the British version of that, a run of 60 meters without the ball from Terry McDermott to score from Steve Heighway's crossball

There are other things we - Europeans and Latin Americans can teach each other about the arts of the game, providing we are willing to appreciate each other and Now, where Liverpool's machine not spitefully hack opponents to Dorsett not nnly caught the 91-yarder for a score but broke nff runs of 46 and 78 yards. He gained 147 yards on the ground (the best performance in the NFL's opening weekendl and caught 107 yards worth of passes. He became the first player in Dallas history to gain 100 yards each rushing and receiving in the same game.

One Play Says It All

The rout was symbolized by the ling touchdown. With the Cowboys leading, 7-0, and facing a third-and-3 situation from his own nine, Staubach flipped a swing pass in Dorsett. The ball was tipped in the line by Baltimnre tackle Joe Ehrmann and fluttered toward Dorsett — who grabbed it away from linebacker Ed Simnnini at the 15. From there it was a footrace, which Dorsett easily won. Staubach's other tnuchdown passes were of 38 yards in Drew Pearson, 8 yards to Billy Joe Du-Pree and 1 yard to Jay Saldi. He also completed a 49-yarder to Tony Hill that set up a 1-yard scoring run by Doug Dennison. Kicker Rafael Septien added a 48-yard field goal. Dallas did not punt nnce, turn-ing the ball over twice in the early going and wasting a 79-yard drive with a missed field goal.

Parker Named Top CFL Player In 25-Year Vote

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, Sept. 5 (AP) - Jackie Parker, who led the Edmonton Eskimos to three consecutive Grey Cup victories in the 1950s, has been named the most outstanding athlete of the last 25 years in the Canadian Football League.

The 46-year-old Parker, known as Old Spaghetti Legs in his playing days as an elusive quarterback and halfback, said he was overwhelmed. He was one of 6 finalists in the voting hy 16 report-ers, who chose from among 20 winners of the CFL's Most Outstanding Player Award.

Parker played for 13 seasons in the CFL, 9 with the Eskimos, 3 with the Taronta Argonauts and one as a player-coach with British Columbia Lions. He retired as the CFL's all-time leading scorer with 750 points. With 88 touchdowns, he was second only to Dick Shatm's record of 91. As a quarterback, Parker completed 1,089 of 2,061 pass attempts for 16,476 yards. He rushed 854 times for 5,210 yards and an average of 6.1 yards, among the best in CFL history.

He was still undefeated then, and fans could buy buttons, badges, bumper stickers and Tshirts with his name. If you owned him, you also could make money just by entering him in a race. He was like Steve Cauthen a year ago: show up and get paid, whatever

So Seattle Slew showed up at Hollywood Park only three weeks after completing his grind for the triple crown. He should have been resting then, getting back the weight and stamina he had sacrificed as the best 3-year-old soldier in the wars, Instead, be was shipped 3,000 miles to California for a rich command performance - and lost for the only time in his

Unions vs. the Multiple-Choice Test

By Jim Mann

MONROE, Mich. — Since 1970, Richard Burger has worked as a power-plant operator at Detroit Edison's generating plant here, often working the midnight shift, sometimes returning home covered with black dust from the mounds of coal piled up alongside

For the entire time, Burger has been dreaming of becoming an instrumeot man. It is a cleaner job that would give him more money, more security and regular daytime hours. However, he has no hope of being promoted. Seven years ago, the company gave him a battery of aptitude tests. He failed - or, in the company's words, scored "not recommended."

Burger, 27, is a man capable of building and wiring his new house, hut he admits he is oot so good at multiple-choice tests. "The arithmetic they gave us was easy, but some of the vocabulary was ridiculous." be recalls. "I can't seem to get over those tests but I know I'd be an excellent instrument man."

Now. Burger and his union, the Utility Workers of America, are hringing to life the fantasy of millions of test-takers across the United States. In a seven-year legal battle, they have been challenging — and so far, defeating — the people who make up multiple-choice

Last year, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit ruled that under federal labor law, whenever a company gives tests to employees, a union has the right to examine the tests — the questions, the answers and the test scores. That was the first time any court had ever held that an employer's duty to provide a union with information relevant to collective bargaining extends to psychologi-

The Supreme Court has agreed to bear Detroit Edison's appeal of the lower-court ruling during the term that begins in October. It is one of the most unusual labor cases the justices have reviewed in the past few years (Detroit Edison vs. National Labor Relations Board,

The case has produced an odd alliance between the American Psychological Association and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. In separate friend-of-the-court briefs, the two groups have suggested that the entire future of psychological testing of employees hangs on the cuttorers of the court

These groups reason that if a union has the right to ohtain copies of a company's tests, then the usefulness of those tests will he destroyed. A company will have no way of knowing, they say, whether a union has turned over copies of the test to some employees

thus permitting them to score higher than they otherwise would

An Argument

"Disclosure of tests to persons with no professional obligation to protect their security will destroy the tests' validity," the Psychological Associatioo says in its brief.

"Publishing psychological tests is a big industry," says Dr. Joseph Sanders of the APA. "We're talking about millions and millions of dollars. This case could have such a chilling effect that most companies would say: 'It just isn't worth it'."

The cities of Los Angeles and San Diego have filed a joint brief at the Supreme Court, urging the justices to rule that psychological tests should remaio confidential.

Richard Burger was one of 10 employees at the Monroe plant who applied for promotioo to instrument man in 1971. Although there were six openings in that classification, none of these men got the jobs. Instead, Detroit Edison filled the vacancies with employees brought in from its other plants - employees with higher test scores hut lower seniority than the 10 applicants from within the plant. The rejected employees, all members of Utility Workers Local 223, then filed a grievance, claiming that the company had violated its con-

The standard multiple-choice tests that Detroit Edison used to rate prospective instrument men were called the Engineering and Physical Sciences Aptitude Test and the Minnesota Paper Form Board Test. The questions were designed to measure an individual's ability to visualize in three-dimensional space and his aptitude in mathematics, arithmetic, verbal comprehension and the physical sciences.

Company officials say that, although the materials are commonly termed psychological tests, they are fundamentally tests of an individual's aptitude, not his personality. Employees are not asked about their sex lives or their family, officials emphasize.

A sample question on the vocabulary section of the test asks employees to decide which word means most nearly the same as "antipathy": A) animosity B) discomfiture C) solviety D) deception E) negation (The answer: A.)

Detroit Edison tests for many other jobs besides instrument man. There is one battery of tests for cahle-splicers and another series for linemen; there are tests for customer-service representatives and tests for computer programmers. Would-be supervisors are required to take a "human relations battery," and clerical employees must take a "clerical battery." According to court testimony, Detroit Edison even has a battery of tests to decide who should be meter readers.

At the company's headquarters in downtown Detroit, William Roskind, director of psychological services, estimates that 6,000 to 7,000 of Detroit Edisoo's 10,000 employees have had tests given to them at one time and the services. them at one time or another.

The company does not use tests to hire lawyers, accountants or other professionals. "We assume that if someone comes from an accredited school, they've learned what they're going to learn," Roskind explains. "How can you develop a test to choose the president of the company?"

But, Roskind says, tests are extremely important in selecting peo-ple like instrument men — people in jobs where "a mistake can cause a blackout of the entire system."

Spatial Perception

"These tests are an objective demonstration that an applicant has the mental abilities we are looking for," Roskind says. "Take spatial perception. No one's ever been able to teach people that. You either have it or you don't."

Two years ago, the National Labor Relations Board voted 2 to 1 to order Detroit Edison to give the union copies of its tests and scores. It is the NLRB, represented by the Justice Department, that will defend Local 223 before the Supreme Court.

The NLRB contends in a legal brief that the union needs to see the tests "to determine the extent to which questions were asked that called for knowledge beyood the requirements of the instrument-man joh." It points out that the NLRB ordered union officials not to release copies of the tests to past or future test-takers. It argues that the company should trust the union to obey this order.

Detroit Edison, the APA and the Chamber of Commerce all are arguing that, if company psychologists gave test scores and papers to a union, they could thereby violate what the APA calls "the confi-denual relationship between the psychologist and the client." While the case is being reviewed by the Supreme Court, Burger will cootinue to fix equipment at the Monroe plant, rotating weekly from the 8 a.m. 4 p.m. shift to the 4 p.m.-midnight shift to the mid-

A few mooths ago, Burger - still seeking the same promotion he wanted seven years ago — once again took the tests for instrument man. "They told me I scored much higher, but still in the 'not-recommended' range," be says.

It was Roskind who told Burger that be had failed once again. "He told me chances are I'll never be able to do that job," Burger recalls. "He said the tests show I can handle the job I'm in now, and that's
